CRISIS NEGOTIATIONS TEAM

The Lorain Police Department Crisis Negotiations Team works with the Special Weapons and Tactical Team and other units within the Department to communicate and negotiate with persons in crisis due to hostage situations, suicidal persons, or barricaded persons. The team is lead by a sergeant and several officers who have received specialized training to de-escalate volatile situations for the safety of all.

2014 Team Members

Sergeant Rick Soto, Team Commander
Detective Brian Denman
Patrolman David Kusznir
Patrolman Jason Orellano.

Incidents Involving Crisis Negotiations Team:

- Wednesday, June 11, 2014, CNT Officer Kusznir responded to a residence on Jaeger Road regarding a domestic violence suspect barricaded inside of the residence. Male walked out of bathroom after SWAT members entered residence and requested for male to come out. (2014-24029).

- Monday, June 16, 2014, CNT responded to the area of East 23rd Street in regards to male barricaded with a handgun and threatening suicide. Male was located after non-response and located with a self-inflicted gunshot to the head. (2014-24784).

- Sunday, June 29, 2014 , CNT responded to a residence at Redbud Place regarding a domestic hostage situation where a female was being held against her will inside of the residence. CNT was able to negotiate this subjects surrender successfully.

- Wednesday, July 9, 2014, CNT responded to the area of Kansas Avenue in regards to patrol officers having responded to Lehigh Avenue where a female escaped from the residence and a male was brandishing a hand gun and barricaded inside of the residence. Male was not inside the residence and later located on the west side of Lorain during a traffic stop.(2014-28480).

CRIMINAL INVESTIGATIONS

2014 Criminal Investigations Division End of Year Summary

Below is the standardized format for investigated crime statistics for 2015;

Crime	Reported	Investigated	Cleared	Cleared by: Arrest	Cleared: Pending Arrest	Cleared by: Other Means	Suspended	Active
Homicide	1	1	1	1	0	0	0	0
Rape	44	41	31	6	8	9	4	12
Felony Assault	177	54	39	26	3	13	9	9
Robberies	95	51	26	18	6	6	21	10
Burglaries	890	118	40	25	11	8	31	46
Larceny	1693	162	91	45	14	19	35	30
Auto Theft	106	12	4	1	4	2	5	2
Total	3006	439	232	106	46	59	105	109
Misc. Investigations	430	430	303	136	27	140	40	87
Total	3436	869	535	242	73	199	145	196

To contrast, I have included is a side by side comparison for 2012/2013/2014. The total number of investigated cases is represented by the first number, with the overall Bureau "cleared" rate following. In the 2013/2014 columns, a decrease in the solved percentage from the previous year would be marked in red (i.e 4%), while an increase in the percentage in solved cases would be marked in blue (i.e 4%)

	2012	2013		2014
Homicide	4 (100%)	5 (100%)	Equal	1 (100%)	Equal
Rape	53 (39%)	40 (60%)	21%	41 (76%)	16%
Felony Assault	52 (58%)	52 (71%)	13%	54 (72%)	1%
Robbery	61 (30%)	62 (50%)	20%	51 (51%)	1%
Burglary	165 (26%)	124 (38%)	12%	118 (34%)	4%
Larceny	101 (38%)	123 (47%)	9%	162 (56%)	9%
Auto Theft	11 (14%)	17 (58%)	44%	12 (33%)	11%
Misc.	577 (81%)	519 (77%)	4%	430 (70%)	7%
TOTAL UCR	447 (48.32%)	423 (50.11%)	1.79%	439 (52.95)	2.84%

In brief, the overall clearance rate (of UCR Index crimes) was 2.84% higher than in 2013 and 4.63% higher than in 2012. This increase has further significance because the total number of investigated UCR Index cases rose 6.42% from 2013, which means that the Detective Bureau is doing more, and getting better results than in previous years. The 2013 statistics show substantial increases from 2012 in clearance rates in all of the UCR categories, and a slight decrease in the clearance rate in only one reported category, non-UCR miscellaneous incidents. The 2013 v 2014 statistics show substantial increases in clearance rates of Rape (16%) and Larceny (9%), with a substantial decrease in Auto Theft clearance (11%). Homicides dropped from 6 in 2013 to 1 in 2014. In looking at the three year picture of clearance rates, the Detective Bureau has dramatically improved its overall clearance rates in all UCR categories..

Notable events in 2014;

- Detective/Sergeant Mark Mccoy completed 2014 as the Property Crimes Supervisor and will be assigned as the Department's Evidence Supervisor for 2015. He was replaced as Property Crimes Supervisor by Sergeant Dennis Camarillo.

- Sgt. Michael Failing was promoted to Lieutenant, and was reassigned from Crime Analysis to Patrol Night Shift Commander. He was replaced in Crime Analysis by Detective Orlando Colon.

- Det. Steve Curry was reassigned from the Criminal Investigations Division to Patrol Team 7 after 21 years of service in the Criminal Investigations Division.

- Detectives Tabitha Angello and Jacob Morris received training to prepare them for State certification as Master Criminal Investigators. It had been planned that both complete this training by the end of 2016, after which both will take a proficiency examination and become certified.

- All Detectives have completed individual Curriculum Vitae's, which are kept current and housed internally and at the Lorain County Prosecutor's Office for use in court proceedings.

- There was one homicide in 2014; however, this was cleared through arrest.

- The Marquise McCall "cold case" homicide was tried, and the principle actor was convicted and sentenced to 33 years in prison.

- Det. Brian Denman and Narcotics Det. Michael Gidich were both assigned to investigate a Public Corruption case involving a Lorain City Clerk of Courts employee. This resulted in convictions at both the Federal and State level.

- Det. Jacob Morris earned an Associate's Degree from Lorain County Community College, bringing the number of Detectives who have earned college degrees at six out of nine. Det. Morris is currently taking classes to earn his Bachelor's degree from Ashland University.

2015:

The up-coming year will provide its challenges. The Department's "calls-for-service" will likely continue to be near 60,000, which will predictably reflect a similar amount of cases assigned to CID as in 2013 and 2014. We will endeavor to produce quality investigations that will assist the Lorain County Prosecutor's Office in their prosecutions. Educationally, the CID members will be assigned training/classes to keep them abreast of emerging trends in criminal investigations and proactive "sweeps" and mass indictments will continue to be used to address "spikes" in crime that are identified through crime analysis.

Captain Roger Watkins
Criminal Investigation Division Commander

NARCOTICS AND SPECIAL INVESTIGATIONS UNIT

The Narcotics Bureau had conducted eighty eight (88) controlled purchases of narcotics through December 30th, 2014. The controlled buys led to fifty-four (54) search warrants and/or knock and talks. The NSI Bureau also conducted five (5) controlled deliveries with the Federal Postal Inspectors. In addition, this bureau and specifically Det. Gidich has conducted or assisted on eleven (11) methamphetamine investigations/labs within Lorain County. Finally, the NSI Bureau successfully completed six (6) computer forensic examinations, and twenty three (23) forensic cell phone examinations.

The focus of the NSI Bureau this year was the rampant distribution and usage of heroin within the city. Over the past couple of years heroin usage and overdoses have increased exponentially. The NSI Bureau has actively pursued as many distributors within the city that time has allowed and has also been involved with the Project DAWN program. Unfortunately with as much success as the NSI Bureau had with trafficking in heroin investigations, the county of Lorain had just as many overdose deaths as the year before.

Between June and September the NSI Bureau worked on a large county wide heroin distribution network in which Wayne Norris was the main distributor. The investigation was a joint venture between the Elyria Police Narcotics Bureau and the Lorain County Drug Task Force. A State authorized wire intercept was approved and for sixty (60) days all three agencies worked primarily on this case. The investigation eventually netted the arrest of twenty seven (27) individuals and the seizure of over one thousand (1000) grams of heroin. In addition a total of seven (7) vehicles and two houses were seized and are subject to forfeiture. As of the date this report was written, twenty two (22) of the original arrests have plead guilty in Common Pleas Court.

Several cases were adjudicated in Common Pleas Court with their seized assets being forfeited to the Lorain Police Department. A total of one-hundred forty-eight thousand five hundred four dollars ($148,504) in cash was forfeited to the law Enforcement Trust Fund of the Lorain Police Department, minus the Lorain County Prosecutor's share. Additionally, a total of ten (10) vehicles were forfeited and sold on GOVDEALS for a total of twenty-six thousand two hundred ninety three dollars ($26,293)

The NSI Bureau will continue to aggressively attack the epidemic heroin trade that has plagued this city for the past several years, along with any other drug related crimes that are discovered. We will continue to work with the Criminal Investigations Bureau on their major cases and whatever other need is identified by the Chief of Police.

OFFICERS ASSIGNED 2014

- Sgt. Tom Nimon
- Detective Chris Colon (Assigned to the DEA Task Force)
- Detective Tim Thompson

NORTHERN OHIO VIOLENT FUGITIVE TASK FORCE-LORAIN COUNTY DIVISION

2014 ANNUAL REPORT

PREPARED BY TASK FORCE OFFICER KURT C. GRAUPMANN

US MARSHALS NOVFTF-LORAIN DIVISION: YEAR END REPORT 2014

The US Marshals Northern Ohio Violent Fugitive Task Force-Lorain Division is comprised of five full time officers and augmented by many part-time officers from various departments throughout Lorain, Erie, and Medina counties. While the area of responsibility for the division is Lorain, Erie and northern Medina counties, the vast majority of our time is spent in the cities of Lorain and Elyria.

For the year of 2014 the task force recorded the following arrests and seizures:

ARRESTS: -over 380 physical arrests
-over 500 cases cleared

SEIZURES: -$25,200 currency
-9 firearms

SIGNIFICANT ARRESTS BY "NOFVTF-LORAIN DIVISION" FOR 2014:

DAVID KALT: sexual predator wanted for numerous sexual assaults; arrested on 05/22/2014 on sexual assault charges. Kalt was also arrested on 10/23/2014 after he absconded on his bond and committed further sexual offenses. Subsequently sentenced to a three year prison term and still awaiting trial on other sexual assault charges.

DAMEON ROBERTSON: drug trafficker and person on interest in an out of state homicide.

JONATHAN RHODES: suspect in "5th 3rd" bank robbery that occurred in Lorain on 04/09/14.

MARKUS MARTIN: arrested on 07/02/2014 for a murder that occurred in Elyria on 07/01/2014. Currently awaiting trial on murder charges.

KELLY BOROS: arrested on 11/20/2014 on weapons charges after a lengthy investigation and manhunt. Sentenced to a four year prison term.

These five examples represent a small sample of the arrests made during 2014. As well as taking dangerous felons off the streets, collaterally, over $25,000 was seized, and 9 firearms were removed from criminal's hands.

PROPERTY AND EVIDENCE

PROPERTY AND EVIDENCE

- In 2014, the Lorain Police Department Evidence Room was under full the supervision of Sergeant Mark McCoy with assistance from Ofc. Larry Swanger.
- The evidence room logged in 3624 evidence items in 2014.
- 56 Sexual Assault Kits and accompanying clothing were submitted into evidence in 2014. The SAKs were further submitted to BCI&I per the Ohio Attorney Generals directive.
- In 2014, Lorain Police Department submitted 661 pieces of drug evidence to the Lorain County Crime Lab. 273 pieces of evidence were also submitted to Richfield BCI&I.
- During the 2014 year, 1,844 evidence items were researched and prepped for disposal via court order.
- In 2014, 95 firearms were submitted into evidence. Weapons suitable for testing through the National Integrated Ballistic Identification Network (NIBIN) were test fired and the casings submitted to BCI for entry into NIBIN. 68 non-firearm weapons were also submitted during the same time frame.
- Cash seized in 122 cases was deposited into the Lorain Police Evidence Account totaling $132,861.47. At year end the Evidence account ending balance was $263,718.50.
- 20 checks were issued from the Evidence account totaling $51,163.51
- 5 LETF checks were issued from the Evidence account totaling $97,562.00
- 150 items entered into the Property and Evidence room were returned to their original owners.
- 43 buccal swabs were collected during investigations. The CID now maintains a registry of persons who have DNA samples on file in Evidence.
- 830 narcotics were submitted into evidence along with 649 paraphernalia items.
- 355 audio/video CDs and DVDs were submitted.
- 860 miscellaneous items were submitted in 2014.

- Lorain Police Department did not hold an auction in 2014. 32 unclaimed bicycles were donated to non-profit youth organizations.
- A legal opinion was requested from the Lorain Law Directors office regarding disposal of Sexual Assault kits (SAK) that were determine by the Bureau of Criminal Investigation to have no evidentiary value or where charges were not sought against a known suspect. It was the conclusion of the Law Director that unless a sexual assault could be closed as Unfounded, the SAKs and accompanying items such as clothing would be retained as evidence. As a result the accumulation sexual assault evidence has had a noticeable impact on storage space.
- Disposal of Weapons was conducted through Republic Steel Technologies in North Canton, Ohio. Drug disposal was conducted under contract with Ross Environmental utilizing a two-man rule for disposal verification. Non-contraband items, such as clothing were disposed of through Allied Waste. Scrap metals through Lorain County Recycling and paperwork, cassette tapes, and photos were disposed of through Shred It Security Company

SUMMARY

Narcan, also known as naloxone, offers immediate help for anyone overdosing from an opiate such as heroin or a prescription painkiller such as OxyContin. If given in time, Narcan can reverse an overdose by restoring breathing. An overdose kit contains the nasal spray form of Narcan that rapidly reverses the effects of opiate overdose.

NARCAN SAVES LIVES IN OHIO

DEALING WITH A SERIOUS MEDICAL EMERGENCY

By J.T. McBride

The local police in northeast Ohio are saving lives. When the regional heroin-related death toll began to reach epidemic proportions in late 2012 and early 2013, Lorain, Ohio Police Chief Cel Rivera and the County Coroner, Dr. Stephen Evans, began working together with other officials to field test the use of Narcan.

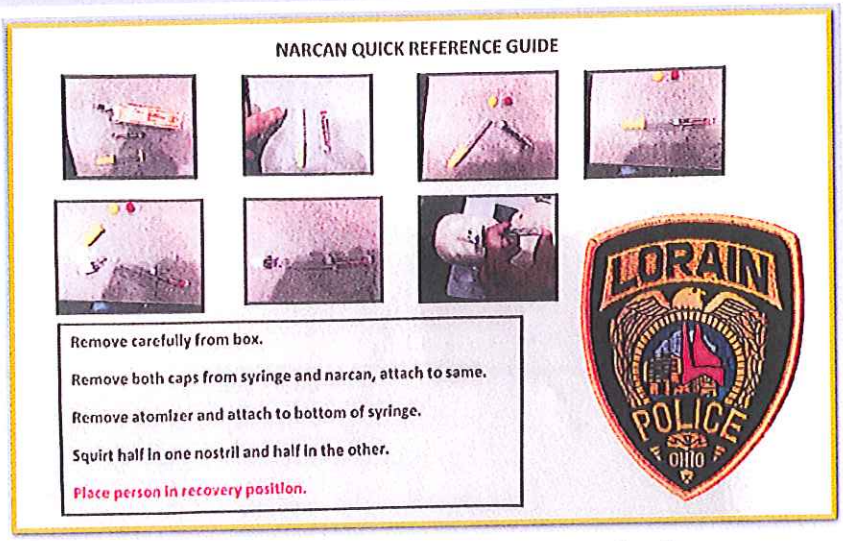
This new tool means that 'street cops' who come upon unconscious overdose victims with growing frequency, are now armed with Narcan kits containing nasal-spray injection devices that can be used to administer doses of Naloxone. Naloxone has been historically used by physicians to counter the effects of opioid overdoses by rapidly countering the life-ending effects of excessive heroin ingestion.

This change in policy regarding the way Lorain police handles overdose (OD) calls for service was prompted by several factors recently cited by Chief Rivera in a special presentation to the Lake County Association of Chiefs of Police. The primary motivation stemmed from the rapidly rising number of deaths associated with opioid overdoses in Lorain County, which numbered over 60 in 2012.

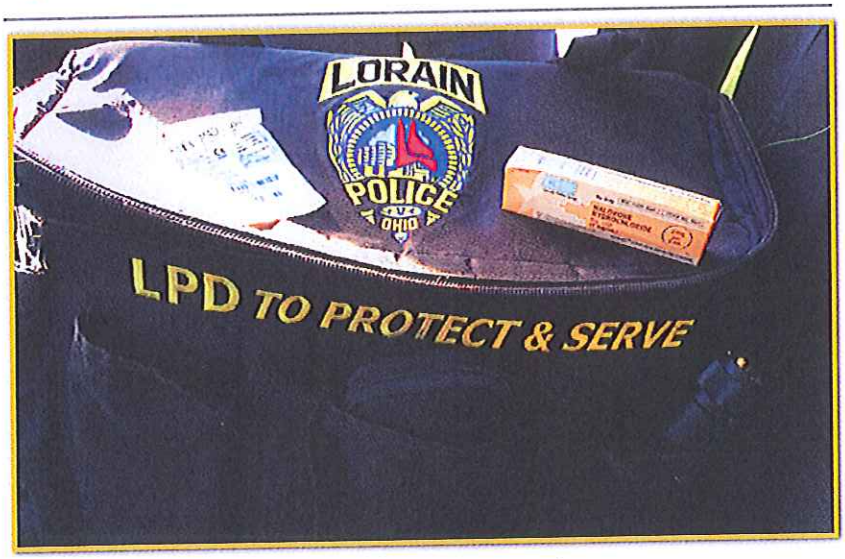
In comparison, there were 21 OD-type deaths in 2010. The second motivating factor stemmed from the frustration of local police officers who often got to the scene while the victim was still alive and had to watch victims die while rescue personnel were on the way to the scene.

CPR and other "first aid" techniques simply weren't effective in such cases, and family members sometimes watched their loved ones pass away while police "stood by and did nothing." In short, something needed to be done and done quickly to stop the deaths of so many local human beings.

As it turned out, Narcan has been used by medical staffers and medics for years to counteract the effects of heroin and other opioid drugs. While it can't bring the dead back to life, as a local newspaper noted, it can delay death long enough to get the victim more effective medical assistance. Fortunately, Naloxone has no effect on persons who are not suffering the effects of an OD episode.



▲ The Narcan Quick Reference Guide shows the step-by-step process.



▲ The overdose kit contains simple-to-use nasal spray.

The design of the kit involved makes it relatively easy to use in the field. When opioid OD is suspected, officers simply have to open the kit (which contains two doses of the medicine), assemble a two-part syringe (which includes a nose-cap instead of a needle), insert the atomizer into a nostril and activate the spray. The device transforms the liquid into a mist, which is rapidly absorbed by blood vessels in the nasal linings. Lorain police can assemble the kit and administer the drug in about 60 seconds.

It is a stable drug that lends itself to storage inside police vehicles in all types of weather, and some local hospitals are willing to acquire the kits at cost to save participating police agencies some money. Medical officials warn that seconds can make the critical difference in such cases, so officers are trained to act quickly. Initiated as an experiment limited strictly to the local area, Lorain's Narcan program has now been approved for state-wide use by the Ohio General Assembly.

Detective Michael Gidich, Narcan project coordinator for the Lorain Police, stated that the focus of the Narcan program is saving lives and not arresting violators. While drug enforcement is a high priority of the LPD, life safety of officers and citizens is a higher concern. He noted that Quincy (Mass.) police had saved nearly 170 lives since 2010 using Narcan, and that Quincy was the agency that originated the Narcan field kit concept now utilized by the LPD.

Rivera and Gidich proudly reported that since its implementation in October of 2013, Lorain's officers had already saved 33 lives in the last 13 months. One Lorain officers was dubbed an "Ace" by his peers after saving his fifth victim. Thanks to Rivera's Project Dawn (Deaths Avoided with Naloxone), Lorain's police officers no longer have to watch people die.

Lorain Police personnel have developed a written Narcan policy statement, Narcan training curriculum and a "how-to" video, which they shared with other Ohio law enforcement agencies. They also displayed a quick reference guide that has proven invaluable to officers in the field. Ohio's police training academy now offers an online training video on Narcan protocols to officers. Ohio law limits liability is cases of Narcan administration when given in good faith, and the side effects of the drug are minimal, lowering the liability exposure of agencies adopting its use.

The U.S. Department of Justice recently held a workshop on the issue in Washington, D.C. (which Rivera attended) and will soon issue a national "white paper" on the topic because of the growing interest in the success of the Quincy-Lorain Narcan projects. The Ohio Department of Health is now offering Narcan training to family members of addicted citizens, and Narcan is also featured in crisis intervention certification classes offered by NAMI and regional health boards.

Rivera cited the low cost of the program along with the significant support for Project Dawn received from Dr. Evans, State Senator Gayle Manning, and the Ohio General Assembly; Mercy Regional Medical Center and its Chief Pharmacist Eric Remster; EMH Elyria Medical Center; Lorain and Elyria public health officials; city and county officials; Lorain FOP Lodge #3; and the local news media.

Gidich said the project was an example of community-based crime prevention at its best and has engendered a great deal of citizen support for the department. "For once," he said, "we have people stopping by the station and saying, 'thank you.'" More importantly, some of the addicts saved by the Project Dawn have reportedly 'gone clean' since their near-death experiences. Lorain police chief attends Narcan symposium in D.C.

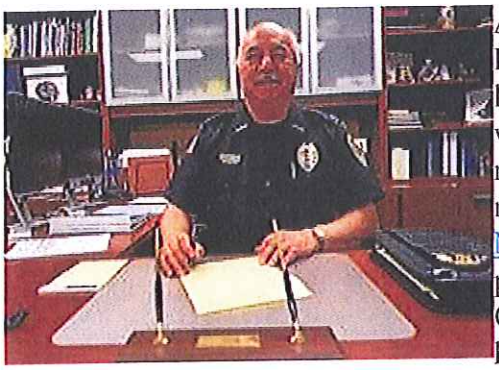
By Eric Bonzar, The Morning Journal

Thursday, August 14, 2014



As law enforcement agencies countywide converged on the Lorain Police Department to announce the disruption of the largest heroin operation Lorain County has ever seen two weeks ago, Lorain police Chief Cel Rivera was sitting in the nation's capital among 34 of the country's leading experts on naloxone and law enforcement.

Naloxone is a medicine that can counter the effects of heroin, prescription painkillers and other opioid drugs.

On July 31, an expert panel of law enforcement organizations, health officials, federal stakeholders and national policy holders convened — at the request of U.S. Attorney General Eric Holder Jr. — inside the Department of Justice to address an epidemic that has grown to unprecedented levels: opioid addiction.

In a recent release, the justice department noted 110 Americans on average die daily from drug overdoses, outnumbering even deaths from gunshot wounds or motor vehicle crashes. Between 2006 and 2010, heroin overdose deaths dramatically increased by 45 percent.

"The abuse of opioids, including heroin and prescription painkillers, is impacting the lives of Americans in every state, in every region and from every background and walks of life — all too often, with deadly results," Holder said in an address. "The use of naloxone has proven to be an effective strategy to prevent the growing number of opioid drug overdose deaths."

Lorain County has felt the effects of opioid addiction and has recorded staggering numbers when it comes to overdose deaths, said Dr. Stephen Evans, the county's coroner.

In the first seven months of this year, Evans said the county recorded 32 deaths as a result of accidental drug overdoses. Of those deaths, 13 were attributed to pure heroin overdoses.

To combat overdoses and prevent accidental deaths, many county agencies are carrying naloxone. Evans says he has seen the positive impact that Narcan, a trade name for the naloxone, has had since its use by first responders to treat heroin overdoes. It was first introduced as Senate Bill 57 by state Sen. Gayle Manning, a North Ridgeville Republican, and signed into law last year by Ohio Gov. John Kasich.

Monthly, Evans meets with members and organizations representing Project DAWN (Deaths Avoided With Naloxone) Lorain County, which he chairs, to discuss and study statistics acquired as a result of the pilot program.

To date, county law enforcement agencies have saved 42 lives by administering naloxone, he said.

"When we started this, I was at the point where if I could save one person, it would be worth all the time and effort that we've spent putting this together," Evans said. "The fact that we have saved 42 people is testament to the program's effectiveness."

Evans said the continuous battle against opioids is a tri-fold process: First, support must come from law enforcement officers who continuously work to combat drugs at a street level by apprehending dealers; secondly, it's saving those who use the narcotic; and third, experts in the field must educate people about the ill effects of drugs and their ramifications on communities while seeking treatment for those affected.

"This is a multi-factorial problem," Evans said.

Well versed in all three aspects in the fight on opioids, Rivera was invited by Holder to participate in the nation's naloxone symposium, where the attorney general "urged federal law enforcement agencies to identify, train and equip personnel who may interact with a victim of a heroin overdose with the drug naloxone."

Rivera said he went to the nation's capital to discuss with those in attendance why his department decided to issue its officers Narcan, what legal barriers within the department they faced and the success of the program.

The eight-hour long, interactive roundtable discussion was part of Holder's agenda to implement a plan for law enforcement agencies across the country to begin carrying naloxone in the nation's continuing fight against opioid addiction.

"They were overwhelmingly receptive to the idea that every law enforcement officer in the country should be carrying this," Rivera said.

Making Narcan readily available to his officers — and first responders countywide — began in 2011 when the county recorded 22 overdoses, the chief said. By 2012, that number skyrocketed 177 percent to 61, prompting him to take action.

"Even though a lot of the deaths took place outside of the city limits, we knew the city was, to some degree, a source of where people were getting the drugs from," Rivera said.

In his discussion with Evans, the Lorain County Sheriff's Office and Elyria Police Department, Rivera cited Quincy, Mass., and its police Lt. Patrick Glynn, who had a plan to combat the drugs, as the blueprint he followed for his proposal to carry Narcan.

In 2007, Massachusetts began its own opioid overdose prevention pilot program with the Quincy Police Department jumping on board in 2010. In its first year, the department saved about 40 lives as a result of using Narcan.

With added support garnered by Evans and Manning, SB 57 is governed by a written policy, a training curriculum and video that is now offered to departments nationwide.

It's been a year since SB 57 was signed into law and the Lorain Police Department will record its first year of administering Narcan in October.

Since then, the program has received state notarization and captured Holder's attention.

Rivera said during that time — whether discussing the program close to home or in the company of some of the country's most prolific leaders — the biggest obstacle faced has been the "shift in philosophy" when it comes to the role of law enforcement to what has been deemed a public health issue.

"Our role is to enforce laws," Rivera said. "Now, we are saying, more than likely, we're not even going to charge you. We just want to come and help you. And that's a shift in philosophy for most departments."

Reluctance from local police departments has been the biggest hurdle Rivera said he has faced when pitching the program, something he says he seen in his own men a year ago.

Rivera said that as the program's effectiveness became apparent and lives were being saved, perspectives changed by all of his officers and skepticism was replaced by support.

"Especially when that first save came, I think it actually made (the officers) feel proud of the fact that they were able to make a difference instead of standing there while somebody died," he said.

"I think it has also helped us with the community. I think more people see us as somebody who wants to, not only enforce the law, but also help people.

"So it behooves us to reduce the reliance on heroin from a public health perspective, and of course, as part of our crime reduction strategy. Everybody has agreed that we need to pull together all of our resources at both the state and federal level — including public health, substance abuse and law enforcement. If we follow through, I think we have a good chance at putting a serious dent in this problem."

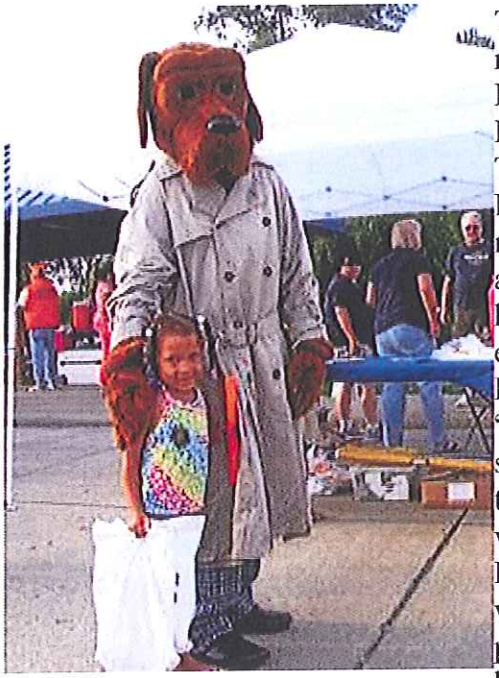
Lorain police, neighborhood watch groups sponsor Taking Back Our Community gathering

By Richard Payerchin, The Morning Journal

Saturday, August 16, 2014



There is less crime and Lorain's neighborhoods are safer when residents work with police officers, according to the Lorain Police Department.

LPD and Lorain's Neighborhood Watch groups sponsored the Taking Back Our Community Gathering Aug. 16 at Riverside Park. Police cars, fire trucks and ambulances were present, but not for any bad reasons. The event had no agenda but was like a casual picnic, with officers and residents sharing a meal of hot dogs, rice and bags of chips. The gathering was open to everyone, with strong attendance by members of the city's Block Watch groups and residents who might join them.

"It's a strong presence in the community," LPD Sgt. Rick Soto said about the Block Watch groups. "The community expects the police to fight crime, but the police hope the community will help them solve crimes."

Last week, national news media descended on Ferguson, Mo., where police and residents have clashed in fights after between police and a man, Michael Brown, 18, who was shot and killed.

The atmosphere there is tense as police, residents and now the nation await details about that incident.

In Lorain, police don't have to build a good relationship with the community because it already exists, Soto said.

"I'm trying to continue it because I think as of right now, we have a good relationship with our community," he said, acknowledging some people may disagree. "We're not building. It's been there; we're trying to continue it."

The relationship is a work in progress that continues evolving. The officers involved said they want to let city residents know more about their work, and how people out in the neighborhoods can interact with police in a good way.

One woman, who said she lives on Oberlin Avenue, approached Lorain Police Chief Cel Rivera. She said a neighbor is trying to coordinate a Block Watch for their street.

"Thank you for having this, but what are we supposed to do?" she asked.

"Just get to know the police and the auxiliary," Rivera answered.

The city has a number of Block Watch groups on the west side, central Lorain and South Lorain, and they all do good work, Soto said.

The East Side Block Watch also had members there and may be the most visible among the Block Watch groups in the city, Rivera said.

ESBW members have custom-made blaze orange shirts, vests and ball caps. The group has rejuvenated Century Park and its beach, and its meetings can draw up to 70 or 80 people, with guest speakers from the police and other city departments, Rivera said.

It is obvious the group has its own sense of Lorain pride and the neighborhood shows it, the chief said.

"Building that pride not only in the city but in that specific neighborhood, if we can build that pride it's going to result in violence prevention and crime prevention," he said.

The event may inspire some new Block Watch members.

Johann Latimer, who moved from Cleveland to Lorain to attend Lorain County Community College, said he was unaware of the city's Block Watch program until the gathering.

He attended with daughters Autumn, 5, and Amarrie, 3. Seventh Street resident Deanna Afrates said she is interested in the program, but noted she has been after the city to demolish a house near hers that has been vacant for seven years. She said she hopes Lorain officials can take action to attract more manufacturers and redevelop the city's waterfront.

PROCEDURES DURING THE ROBBERY

REMAIN CALM. Do exactly what the robber asks, no more or no less. Explain any movements or actins you make to the robber before you make them, so as not to cause panic.

ACTIVATE ALARM SYSTEM WHEN SAFE TO DO SO. Use bait money, dye packs and "trip switches" as available in your facility.

DO NOT STALL OR ATTEMPT TO APPREHEND THE ROBBER(S). The sooner the robbers get what they came for, the sooner they leave your bank. We do not want a hero in exchange for a human life. Money can be replaced — YOU cannot!

POST-ROBBERY PROCEDURES

NOTIFICATION. As soon as possible, but only when safe to do so, notify local law enforcement by dialing 9-1-1, and then your bank manager, confirming that a robbery has occurred. Stay on the line with the 9-1-1– operation until they release you.

PRESERVATION. Secure the area where the robbery occurred. Close and lock all doors, stop all business transactions. Keep customers and employees away from any physical evidence the robbers may have left behind: note, money, bag, clothing, fingerprints and footprints.

OBSERVATION. Have all employees record what they observed during the robbery. Hand out Suspect ID Charts to everyone in the bank. Try to keep customers in the bank until the officer arrives. If not, get name/address/telephone number before the customer leaves.

IMPORTANT—DO NOT PERMIT WITNESSES TO DISCUSS THEIR OBSERVATIONS AMONG THEMSELVES, but have them write down what they themselves remember about the robbery.

Bank Robbery

Prevention and Awareness

There are few crimes that are more frightening and potentially dangerous as BANK ROBBERY. Customers and employees alike can become victims. During any given year the odds are 1 in 9 that a banking facility will fall victim to robbery.

OBJECTIVES OF ROBBERY AWARENESS TRAINING

- Prevent robbery.
- Prevent injury or death to customers, employees, and law enforcement if a robbery should occur.
- Get the robber out of the bank as soon as possible.
- Aid law enforcement in identification of the robbers.

Keep these four objectives in mind at all times, especially the first objective!

This brochure will give you a working knowledge of what is required to help reduce the chance of a robbery to your banking facility. As in any crime prevention program, we cannot control all of the factors involved in criminal activity thus ensuring that your business will never be robbed; but we can control, through education and training, your bank's susceptibility to a potential robbery and your employees' reaction if the situation should occur.

WHAT DOES ROBBERY AWARENESS TRAINING INCLUDE?

1. Prevention Techniques
2. Procedures During the Robbery
3. Post-Robbery Procedures

Suspect Description Form

Sex Male ☐ Female ☐	Race White ☐ Black ☐ Other ☐	Age
Height		Left/Right Handed
Weight		Hat (Color/Type)
Hair (Color/Style)		Tie
Eyes		Coat
Glasses Type		Shirt
Tattoos		Trousers
Scars/Marks		Shoes
Complexion		Weapon
Facial Hair		Accent

PREVENTION TECHNIQUES

1. Be alert for strangers and suspicious acting people in your bank. Even an amateur will "case" a bank prior to a robbery. If you suspect someone, do not hesitate to use the camera to take photographs of the suspicious subject. If the person poses a threat in any way, notify the branch manager, security officer, or call police. A false alarm is no problem as long as it is the result of alert employee action.
2. Know and strictly follow your bank's opening and closing procedures. Honest customers will appreciate your precautions and not insist on special attention. Know what is to be done when the opening/closing codes and routines are not followed. You should have emergency numbers within reach at all times, not just at your work station.
3. Know where alarm buttons are located. Practice reaching for alarms without detection so that during a real robbery, you can activate the alarm secretly.
4. Keep robbery kits up to date. All employees should know where the kits are located and how to use them. Also, the height markers on exit doors should be visible to all work stations.

One among many …
…can you pick yours out of a crowd?

Help us to help you recover your belongings by marking your valuables.

Will your lost or stolen items make their way back to you?

Marking your valuables aids the police in returning your items to you in the event they are lost or stolen.

Hopefully you will never experience the loss of your valuable or prized possessions; but if something should happen to your belongings, if they are marked with your driver's license number, it will be so much easier to return them to you in the event they are recovered.

If your property were to disappear today, would you be able to provide your local authorities with a list of what is missing? How would you identify your goods? Do you know the serial numbers?

Making a list of your property will aid in reporting should your items be stolen. In addition to having the information for the police, it will be readily available for your insurance company as well.

What should you do?

1. Use the table on the back of this brochure to list your valuables. The serial number is especially important and helpful. Use additional paper if your list is long. We have made a sample entry on the first line to help you get started.

If you have computer access, Report It lets you securely store serial numbers, item descriptions, pictures, and scans of receipts so that your items may be more easily identified in the event of theft or loss.

Where do I find Report It ?

https://reportit.leadsonline.com/

2. Include as much of the information as you can. If possible, supplement your list with photographs. While they are not necessary, they may prove useful.
3. Try to be as detailed as possible. Then place the list with your important papers.

How will we help?

You may borrow marking tools from the Lorain Police Department. The marking pens will not mar the looks of your belongings, but will show up when looked at under ultraviolet light, making it possible for us to return recovered items to you.

Call 204-2105 to make an appointment to borrow marking tools free of charge.

The Lorain Police Auxiliary will:

1. drop off the marking tools to you;
2. give you an hour to mark your items with your driver's license number, and
3. will come back to pick up the tools.
